DENTON — A lesson on love is in store as the Texas Woman's University Department of Drama presents Carlos Goldoni's "Mirandolina, Mistress of the Inn" April 20-22 on TWU's Denton campus.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. Thursday, April 20 through Saturday, April 22 in the Atrium Theatre, located in the Patio Building at Oakland and Third streets. Tickets are $10 for adults and $5 for students. For information and reservations, contact the TWU Box Office at (940) 898-2020.

The play's namesake is a young woman who runs the inn she inherited from her father. Guests at the inn include the Marquis of Forlipopoli and the Count of Albafiorita, two clumsy noblemen who seek to win Mirandolina's heart. A third guest, the Baron of Ripafrattata, is an avowed woman-hater who wants nothing to do with Mirandolina. Viewing this as a challenge, Mirandolina is determined to make the baron fall in love with her. Her success only complicates matters further.

The cast includes Lindsay Turman (Lamesa) as Mirandolina, Tom Stratton (Denton) as Ripafratta, Josh Hancock (Kilgore) as the Marquis, Brad MacEntire (Carrollton) as the Count, Chris Becher (Denton) as Fabrizio, Erica Cole (Denton) as Ortensia, and Annie Anderson (Fort Worth), Tarah Blasi (Wichita Falls) and Kelly Davis (Iadlou) as the three servants.

Director Jaymes Gregory (Haltom City) also serves as set designer for the production. Costumes are designed by Amber Devlin, with lighting by Nic Carbonero and sound design by Erica Cole and Sally Shepard.
