

A Time for Change:
President Barack Obama in African American History

Tuesday, February 17th

2:30pm - 4:00pm

CFO 203

Join us as Paul Dunbar, an instructor of African American history in TWU's Department of History and Government, explores President Barack Obama's election in the context of African American history. Following the talk, a panel of students will discuss their impressions of the election's historical and personal significance.

Sponsored by the Office of Intercultural Services and the Department of History and Government.

Refreshments served following program.

