TWU AWARDED $900,000 IN FEDERAL GRANTS FOR SCHOLARSHIPS

Texas Woman's University will use $900,000 in federal grant money to help economically disadvantaged students pursue degrees in nursing and occupational therapy.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services' Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) has awarded TWU the funds through the Scholarships for Disadvantaged Students Program, with $664,350 to provide scholarships to undergraduate nursing students and $235,650 for students in occupational therapy.

The funding was awarded through the Public Health Services Act and the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009.

“These scholarships will provide access to TWU's outstanding nursing and occupational therapy programs for students from diverse backgrounds who will serve the citizens of Texas as nurses and occupational therapists,” said Dr. Richard Nicholas, TWU vice president for student life.

For more information regarding the scholarships, contact the TWU Student Life Office at 81-3615.

The Scholarships for Disadvantaged Students (SDS) Program was established through the Disadvantaged Minority Health Improvement Act of 1990 to increase diversity in the health professions and nursing workforce to ensure culturally effective care and reduce health disparities. The program provides grants to eligible health professions and nursing schools for use in awarding scholarships to students from economically disadvantaged backgrounds.

The HRSA is the primary federal agency for improving access to health care services for people who are uninsured, isolated or medically vulnerable. For more information, visit www.hrsa.gov.

TWU LIBRARY SCIENCE PROGRAMS' ACCREDITATION REAFFIRMED

The master of arts in library science and master of library science programs at Texas Woman's University have earned continued accreditation from the American Library Association through the spring of 2017.

The ALA Committee on Accreditation removed the programs from the conditional accreditation status it previously had received due to concern regarding adequate evidence of planning. The decision to grant continued accreditation without conditions was based on the program presentation by TWU library science faculty, the External Review Panel Report and the committee meeting attended by Dr. Ling Hwey Jeng, director of the TWU School of Library and Information Studies (SLIS), and Dr. Jennifer Martin, dean of the TWU Graduate School.

“Our faculty worked hard to put together a superb program presentation for the accreditation review, and provided ample evidence of the school's accomplishments and progress on strategic planning,” Dr. Jeng said. “The collective faculty efforts and the university's unwavering support for SLIS are keys to our success.”

According to the ALA, accreditation assures that higher education institutions and their programs meet appropriate standards of quality and integrity. For more information, visit www.ala.org/accreditation.
